

Mokatorī

Our possible futures

The End
Episode 0

Nylnoo^h

Mokatori (or Motokari)* is a word of the Amazonian Yanomami indigenous people who designates climate change.

You can't predict the future, but you can achieve it

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons by-sa 4.0 International Licence © Nylnook aka Camille Bissuel 2016 / www.nylnook.com

This means you can freely share and adapt it, including commercially, on the condition of quoting the author and maintain the same free license to broadcast it.

Last time there was as much carbon dioxide (CO₂) in the atmosphere there is today... was 3 million years ago*.
Dinosaurs were not even born.

Mexico City, Mexico, November 27, 2015

When I was 17, at the end of the twentieth century, my mother told me that I was part of the generation that could no longer believe in anything.

Good or bad, the greatest ideologies of the twentieth century had collapsed or were in the process of collapse:

Walls had fallen, but capitalism remained, with an illusion of democracy.

Not that it's good, but no one came up with something better

The time for ideas was over, and politics were meaningless.

Since I was born, we never had a period longer than 3 years without an economic crisis, in my country or anywhere else in the world.

I didn't know at that time I would experience at least two major revolutions
in my life:

the digital revolution

and the climatic revolution...

That I would have to fight
just to be able to breathe without poisoning myself.

And also to preserve the freedom
I was given.

and from time to time, I receive letters from the future...

Fukushima, March 11, 2057
Ceremony for celebrating the end of the nuclear power plant decommissioning

Following in the next episode « Business as usual »...

Thank you to my supporter Sophie, my reviewers Géraldine, Fabien, Émilie, Eve, David, Caroline, Corinne and Eric. Thank you in particular to David, Caroline, Corinne and Eric for their corrections in English, thank you to all members of Swarm Dynamics and PlaceToB for their support and their boundless enthusiasm, and thank you to Michael Keller and Al Jazeera America for their great web comic reader, and finally Bookelis to make this self-publishing possible! This episode is co-produced by two readers and patrons David H and Dominique, thank you so much!

Notes :

*p2 : According to my sources, the term used is either "Motakori" or "Motokari"... If you speak Yanomami, please let me know!

*p5 : Source Gilles Ramstein, "Voyage à travers les climats de la terre" (Literally "Travel through the earth climates"), Ed. Odile Jacob, p.282

*p9 : Drawing of the city dump from the photo by Curtis Palmer "e-waste", Creative Commons By

Want to read more?

Become a patron of Nylnook on Tipeee!
www.tipeee.com/nylnook

ISBN : 979-10-95663-04-1

Published on www.bookelis.com